A Message from Eric Seifarth of Crane Creek Vineyards

Creek Vineyards and Sally were one and the same. Although she had as ideal a life as a dog could have, she is sincerely missed by the staff and many of you who continue to ask about her.

Initially my thought was simply a quiet burial and an informal memorial with my family and staff. Over the last few months it has become clear that she did mean a great deal to great many of the folks who knew and loved her over the years.

Many of our guests and friends may know and others may not. Crane Creek lost one of our most beloved vineyard dogs, Sweet Sally, last November.

Sally truly was an integral part of our home here at Crane Creek. She was with me as I planted some of the first vines here in the spring of 1996. She watched and helped raise my two sons from age six months to age 15. To many, including our neighbors, Crane

In this spirit our extended family here at Crane Creek will host a celebration of Sally's life on Friday March at 5:00 pm. A tree planting (a dogwood of course), light snacks, and a toast with a glass of "Sweet Sally"!

Q and A Column from John Oxendine Georgia's Insurance and Fire Commissioner

Q: If I rent a car while I'm on vacation, do I need to buy the rental company's insurance?

A: Many people purchase insurance at the auto rental counter without knowing whether their existing policies or credit card benefits might already cover their needs. Meanwhile, other drivers inadvertently underinsure their rental car, placing themselves at risk.

Drivers should educate themselves before they reach the auto rental counter.

Review your auto insurance policy or call your insurance agent before your vacation.

If your current policy doesn't offer coverage for a rental car, see if an insurance rider can be added for a small fee.

Many credit cards include some level of collision and theft protection. In most cases, these benefits are secondary to your personal auto insurance or the car rental company's insurance, meaning the credit card company will only pay claims after other insurance coverage has been exhausted. Call your credit card company and ask about benefits.

If you lack personal auto insurance and your credit card does not provide benefits, it might be wise to purchase the liability insurance and collision damage waiver at the car rental counter.

Keep in mind that if it is a longer-term rental (e.g., a week, a month or more), there might be limitations on the coverage your existing auto insurance policy provides. Check with your insurance company or agent for details.

If you don't own a car, you might want to consider purchasing a non-owner auto insurance policy, because it provides benefits in addition to coverage for a rental car.

When traveling on business, a personal auto policy will generally not apply, so check with your employer for guidance.

You are not alone if you find car rental insurance confusing. In a recent survey, approximately 42 percent of respondents said they were either thoroughly confused or had only a rough idea about insurance coverage when renting a car. If you are unclear about the car rental insurance options, or are concerned that a rental company is misrepresenting information, check with our Consumer Services Division at 1-800-656-2298.

Please send your insurance questions to: Insurance Commissioner John Oxendine, 716 West Tower, 2 Martin Luther King Jr. Drive, Atlanta, GA 30334. Or call 404-656-2070 (toll free at 1-800-656-2298), from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. weekdays, for assistance with an insurance question. Website www.gain-insurance.org.

Cook releases new book of poetry

Poets have long drawn inspiration from their faith, putting pen to paper to provide scope and meaning to the vastness that is God. With the publication of his new book, Beyond The Mountain Haze, Charles Cook offers readers a glimpse into his own personal faith with a collection of poetry that will touch the heart and engage the mind.

With nearly 200 poems covering myriad topics, Beyond The Mountain Haze takes time to express Cook's deep appreciation for his heritage, paying homage to his Southern Appalachian roots. Other themes include love of family, blessings of God, respect and living a life full of Christian love. The poem Mountain Morn showcases Cook's simple, metered rhymes:

*The morning haze engulfs the sun,
Where air is damp and cold;
The red-tailed hawk ascends the ridge
While deer graze on the knoll.
The daylight glistens 'cross the glade,
As distant cow-bells chime;*

*The peace of heaven comes again
To those who seize the time.
The mountain morn revives the soul,
And brings a sense of hope;
While fleeting moments of the dawn
Transcend across the slope.
Perhaps God gives a simple clue
Of how the earth was born;
Creation's splendor unveiled once more,
Revealed with mountain morn.*

Filled with vivid images and a cheerful cadence, Beyond The Mountain Haze will appeal to readers of all ages and from all walks of life.

Charles Cook was born and raised in the mountains of north Georgia. He graduated from Union County High School in 1957. He has a bachelor's degree in education from North Georgia College and a master's degree from the University of Georgia. He has been writing poetry for more than 30 years, and is a member of the Georgia Poetry Society and the Byron Herbert Reece Society. He can be reached at 478-784-8428 or by email at cook2730@bellsouth.net. NT(Feb24,A12)SH

Maybe spring fever is getting to you, or perhaps you cannot tell a valuable native plant from a weed. Help is available. The Preservation Committee of the Community Council will kick off the 2010 season with its Volunteer Orientation on March 1st at 10 AM, in the auditorium of the Georgia Mountain Research & Education Center. The Orientation will be a great time to meet like-minded folks, learn more about the native plants of this area and maybe even enjoy a snack. The Orientation will provide an introduction to the Preservation Committee and its projects, and a short lesson on the various natural regions of north Georgia and western North Carolina.

This group of volunteers meets twice a month during spring, summer and fall to help maintain the native plant gardens at the GMRE Center.

In the Ethnobotanic Garden, we prune, pull a lot of weeds, and mulch the garden beds, and we do general trail maintenance along the shady Woodland Medicine Trail. In the past season have transformed an old cannery into an interpretive center and have begun work on restoring an old spring area. We are very informal, some work for an hour or two, some of us work longer. We share the work and learn a lot about plants, birds and anything else that lives in our gardens and in the southern Appalachians. Enthusiasm for plants is more important than extensive horticultural knowledge. We will begin gardening in earnest on March 15 at 9 AM in the garden.

The GMRE Center is located three miles south of Blairsville on Hwy 19/129 south. For more information, please call Clare Johnston at 706-745-2655. NT(Feb24,A5)SH
