

DEDICATED TO THE PROMOTION OF TOWNS COUNTY

OPINIONS & COMMENTARY

Letters to The Editor

Dear Editor:
We were very disturbed to read the full page ad printed in the Towns County Herald of January 22, 2014 titled Alert: Are Trial Lawyers Trying to Buy Republican Politicians?

Among the statements printed was this: "Trial Lawyers supported Obamacare which is bad for seniors, bad for business and bad for jobs." We are seniors and do not see that it is bad for us.

We consider this ad to be a smear campaign against both Representative Stephen Allison (Republican) and President Obama (Democrat).

Sincerely,
Lewis and Melda Davis

From the Desk of:

Sheriff Clinton of Towns County

Email scams
Odds are, you've received an email from someone trying to scam you. This is such a frequent occurrence that it is often the theme for late night comedy or stand up routines, yet people still get taken advantage of. Often, these scams referred to as "Nigerian Email Scams" are designed to tug on one's heart strings. There will be a sob story as well as an opportunity to help this person and make a lot of money doing so.

These emails generally contain a plea for help from someone claiming to be former government leaders, business people, spouses of former officials, etc., whose money is tied up in a foreign country. Frequently, Nigeria was used in the story lines, thus the name "Nigerian Email Scam."

The themes vary, but generally there will be an offer to transfer a large sum of money to the recipient's bank account in exchange for the recipient paying taxes or fees so that the sender can access the rest of their fortune.

Typically, when one responds they will receive further instructions complete with official looking documents. Sometimes they are invited, or encouraged to travel to a foreign country to complete the transaction. There are documented cases of scammers having large amounts of counterfeit money to complete the hoax.

Here's the catch: these emails are from thieves who would steal your money. They will come up with any number of emergencies that will delay transfer, but once they have your money, it and the thieves will vanish. There are reports of people who responded to these scams being threatened, beaten, and even murdered.

So what should you do? Remember that con-artists are very good at manipulating people. They often use tactics that play on your emotions, but they are thieves and nothing more. If you receive an email from someone in a foreign country asking you to send money, simply delete it. Their sad story is concocted and they are only trying to steal your money.

If you are concerned, not sure what to do, contact our Sheriff's Office at 706-896-4444, or via internet at www.townssheriff.com. We will be more than happy to assist you in any way we can. As your sheriff, it is both my duty and my desire to help keep you and your property safe from all criminals.

RARE KIDS; WELL DONE

By Don Jacobsen

Q: Dear Dr. Don, our 11-year old is lazy. I know that's not politically correct language, but that's what it is. We can't get him to do anything around the house. His room is a pig sty and he won't do his chores even though we beg till we're blue. Is this an 11-year-old thing that he'll get over?

A: Yes, it's an "11-year-old thing." But it can also be a 15-year-old thing and a 16-year-old thing. And a 29-year-old thing. But it's a really important thing and I applaud you for not just looking the other way. A very wise man - the Apostle Paul, actually - had some strong sentiments on the issue, too. He said, "If a man will not work, he shall not eat." Please note that I am NOT suggesting that parents withhold food as a means of punishment. Paul was talking to adults and dealing with what had become an entitlement mentality in the early Christian church.

But I believe, as my Aussie friends would say, he was spot-on. The principle: If a person doesn't carry his/her share of the load they should be made to feel uncomfortable. And the earlier we get a handle on that rule with our kids the less apt they are to still be freeloading when they're 29. Ignoring instructions from mom and dad is a learned skill so we can speed up the un-learning process, too.

So, tell your son, just once, that you want him to take out the trash. Then leave the room. Don't threaten, plead, or bargain. If he ignores you, take out the trash yourself. But the next time he wants to do something he enjoys, for instance, use his iPad, tell him that he has lost the use of it for a week. Or his cell phone. Or his bike. Or his skateboard. Whatever will get his attention. Don't give in if he cries, yells, or otherwise makes his discomfort known. In fact, tell him that anytime he fusses, it adds another day to the penalty.

Explain that there's a new sheriff in town and that from this day forward he is expected to carry his responsibilities or there will be a memorable consequence. In a couple of weeks he will begin to remember about the new sheriff thing. Hard core cases may take four weeks, but he'll eventually get it. Providing... that you don't waver.

Agencies partner for farm equipment road safety message

The Chestatee/Chattahoochee RC&D Council is constantly working on ways to help make our citizens lives better, safer, more prosperous, and to improve our standard of living. One way we try to accomplish this is to remind our citizens of safety hazards and things that can suddenly change the course of their lives in ways that we don't usually think of.

There is nothing more startling than to come around one of these mountain curves while gazing out at the beautiful scenery and there dead ahead is a tractor with a bale of hay on each end going 15 miles per hour. Sometimes there are flashing lights on it to warn drivers, but many times there is nothing but the back end of a hay bale. This sudden slow down to 15 MPH irritates many drivers and they will take any chance they get to drive around the slow moving farm machine even if there are cars coming from the other direction. I guess the rule of no passing when cars are coming doesn't apply to passing a tractor, but the consequences could and many times are fatal.

While this traffic situation happens more often in other parts of Georgia, it still happens up here and the results are the same, not good for anybody. I sometimes drive my tractor for short distances on the highway when it is not practical to load it up on the trailer as do many of my neighbors when they are feeding cows down the road from the barn. I try to pull over as soon as I can to let cars by, but it is not always possible and the driver behind many times gets furious because they have to be delayed for 5 minutes to their important destination. We all have to remember that the feed, fertilizer, seed, or crops that the farmer is hauling today will turn into the food on our table tomorrow so we all need to work together to help keep them farming. The number of crashes on Georgia roads involving farm equipment rose 7 percent in 2012. When harvest season approaches, the state's highway safety and agriculture agencies team up to bring attention to the need for more safety on Georgia's rural roads.

While motorists cruise the beautiful rural roadways of Georgia this year, they should be aware of slow-moving farm equipment using those roads during harvest season. The Department of Agriculture and the Governor's Office of Highway Safety have worked for the last two years to get this message out to drive safely around slow-moving vehicles, but it's clear there is still more work to do. Statistics from 2012 show that nine deaths resulted from 429 farm-equipment related crashes and 185 people reported injuries. As our farmers are working to bring in the year's crop, Georgians are reminded of farmers' increased presence on the roadways. While travel-

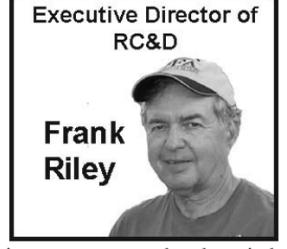

GUEST COLUMNS

From time to time, people in the community have a grand slant on an issue that would make a great guest editorial. Those who feel they have an issue of great importance should call our editor and talk with him about the idea. ing, you are urged to be mindful of tractors and other farm equipment sharing the same roadway and to take extra precaution. When sharing the road with other motorists, farmers should have red reflective triangles posted on their equipment to signal to drivers they are operating a slow-moving vehicle. The triangle should be visible and if it is rusted or faded, it should be replaced. The Departments want our farmers to have a happy harvest and for motorists to get home safely.

By law, farm equipment must have the nationally designated slow-moving vehicle sign - a red triangle-shaped reflector - to warn oncoming drivers that their equipment is on the road. These vehicles often travel at speeds no higher than 25 mph. When drivers come up on slow-moving vehicles on an open country road, many won't think twice about passing them in a hurry and motorists are reminded that these farmers have every right to use the roadway, too. Waiting a few minutes to safely pass or for the driver to pull over won't impact their drive substantially, and everybody will get home unharmed to drive another day.

Hit the trail
Some time ago, I was watching a program on the educational channel on TV. There were four or five individuals who were relating their experiences while walking the Appalachian Trail. Each one of them shared their personal encounters with poisonous snakes and savage animals, their struggles with climatic conditions, the times of sheer physical exhaustion and their mental challenges, especially with periods of depression. But each one of them testified that it was a life-changing experience, filled with jubilation when they began the descent on Mount Katahdin, ME. Two or three of them cried with sheer joy on the completion of the journey.

Those who begin the challenge of walking the Appalachian Trail must count the cost if they hope to finish the Trail. The Appalachian Trail begins at Springer Mountain, GA and winds its way for 2,100 miles through high mountains, deep valleys, and presents the challenges with wild animals, exposes them to unpredictable weather and those who undertake the journey must be up to a grueling physical and mental challenge if they endure to the end to Mount Katahdin, ME. Because of the sacrificial demands of this monumental journey, less than one in ten hikers actually completes the Trail. Like the Appalachian Trail the Christian life presents the traveler with temptations, trials, troubles, doubts, fears and a mixed bag of threats and dangers. Along the path, we sometimes are greeted with heartaches, sorrows, grief, anxiety, discouragement and depression.

Again, like the Appalachian Trail, the Christian trail is abundant with breath-taking rewards. Even in the valley there are experiences that are nothing less than miraculous. What about that mountain top? The view is spectacular. God fills up the journey with sparkling sunrises and golden sunsets. All along the way the traveler views the handiwork of God in each child, mom, dad, sister, brother, grandmother, granddad; in every tree, plant, flower and all the heavens, with the moon, sun, stars and galaxies declaring the glory of God.

Unlike the Appalachian Trail, we always travel with our guide, the Lord Jesus Christ who has blazed the trail before us. He points out the pitfalls. He protects us from the evil one. He provides physical and physical sustenance for the journey. When we descend into the valley He is there. When we climb the hill He is there. There is nothing that we encounter along the way that He is not with us. The journey is always sweet and joyful because of His presence. The end of the journey is indescribable. The reward is heaven. We begin here on earth with Christ, but when the journey is complete it is heaven where a crown of righteousness awaits those who endure to the end. Our endurance is through Christ. Isn't it time you hit The Trail with the Trailblazer?
